Published as part of the Bridgewater Treatises. The Earl of Bridgewater, a gentleman naturalist, commissioned eight Bridgewater Treatises upon his deathbed to explore "the Power, Wisdom, and Goodness of God, as manifested in the Creation." They first appeared during the years 1833 to 1840 and can be regarded as a forerunner of the intelligent design arguments put forward by creationist biologists. William Buckland (1784-1856) was that classic Victorian, a theologian but also a geologist and palaeontologist who gave the first full account of a fossil dinosaur and was a pioneer in the use of fossilised faeces, for which he coined the term coprolites, to reconstruct ancient ecosystems.

[38856] Bucknill, C. E. R. Sea shells of New Zealand. Auckland: Whitcombe and Tombs, [1924]. Quarto, 123 pp., 12 uncoloured plates. Publisher's paper covered boards with tipped on Nautilus plate, a fine copy, scarce in this condition. $80

Publisher's cloth, some wear, front endpaper loose, a sound copy. $250

Philip Henry Gosse (1810-1888) was an English naturalist and populariser of natural science. He created and stocked the first public aquarium at the London Zoo in 1853 and published the first book on aquariums in 1854. Deeply religious and a staunch opponent of Darwinianism he was enshrined, probably unfairly, by his son Edmund Gosse's book Father and son, first published 1907. The best edition, the first edition of 1854 does not have the coloured plates.

[3953] Gould John. Monograph of the Pittidae [facsimile]. Melbourne: Hill House, 1989. Folio, 9 colour plates and accompanying text leaves. Publisher's blue cloth, fine copy. $350
